get that?"

At parties, she offers Pampered Chef products at a discount, but the sales aspect takes a backseat to the cooking.

"The main thing is that the parents don't feel any pressure, and most parents appreciate that I'm able to make the products that their kids are using available."

Though Stern learned a lot from her days as a teacher, she stresses the importance of flexibility when working with children.

"With cooking, things frequently don't come out as expected, and it's important to teach the kids that.

"The most rewarding part of it all is getting kids excited," she said. "They feel so proud of themselves and I'm so happy to be a part of that."
